re: RoboGroup T.E.K. Ltd Immediate Disclosure

Following to RoboGroup T.E.K. Ltd. (the company or RoboGroup) announcement dated December 14, 2003, additional details regarding the suit filed by the Company against Furier System (1989) Ltd. (Furier).

The suit arises from improper competitive activities by Furier within the technology training market. Furier has hired three former employees of RoboGroup who are currently engaged by Furier in the technology training market, and are using commercial secrets of RoboGroup. In addition, Furier is being sued for the violation of a distribution agreement signed with Robotec Technologies Ltd. (Robotec), in March 2003, nominating Robotec as an exclusive distributor of Furier's products in Israel.

The suit seeks injunctions, damages and other affirmative relief.

For the damages arising from the violation of the distribution agreement, the Company seeking return of expenses actions incurred by Robotec, in an amount of approximately NIS 100,000, for an injunction for detailed information about the revenues lost by Robotec due to the violation of the agreement by Furier, and compensation in an amount, to be determined, representing the profits lost to the Company.

For the use of commercial secrets and other torts detailed in the suit, the Company is seeking for damages in the highest level possible under the Commercial Torts Law, 1999 and the Libel Prohibition Law, 1965, as compensations without the proof of damages (i.e. NIS 100,000 for each tort).

The aggregate amount of damages sought in the suit as a result of commercial torts of Furier and for the violation of the distribution agreement is NIS 2.6 million.

Very truly yours
