Form 425
February 01, 2010

Filed by the Black and Decker
Corporation Pursuant to Rule 425 under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended and deemed filed pursuant to Rule 14a-12
of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended

Subject Company: The Stanley Works

(Commission File No. 1-5224)

Manager Talking Points

Organization structure for Stanley Black & Decker

What's New

KEY POINTS:

Black & Decker's Power Tools Organizations will align with the Construction & DIY Segment, headquartered in Towson

The combined hardware businesses will align with Mechanical Security Solutions.

Engineered Fastening Systems will represent an additional growth platform for the combined company.

Organization Structure and Leadership

The new structure reflects the combined company's business segmentation (eg CDIY, Industrial and Security) and leverages the natural alignment that exist between businesses including the two Hardware businesses, the significant geographic overlaps particularly in North America, Latin America, Europe and Asia, and the opportunity to leverage the efficiencies of shared services and centralized corporate functions.

This announcement does not alter your current role and reporting relationship. Your reporting relationship will be clarified as the organizational definition deepens External communications (customers, suppliers, etc) will be handled in the normal course of business and unless authorized to do so, you should route external requests for comment through the appropriate channels.

We will continue communicate regularly with you, and you can continue to use the Q&A portions of the integration site going forward. Between now and the close of the transaction (late Q1/early Q2)

Stanley Black & Decker Corporate Structure Organization Announcement Employee Q&A

1. When am I going to start working in the new organization? When am I going to start working with my new boss?

We continue to operate as two separate companies until such time as we obtain shareholder and regulatory approval and we announce that the transaction has closed.

2. I am an employee of business unit that is merging or rolling up under a new business unit. How will this change impact me?

As you might expect, it is difficult to speculate how these actions will affect each individual, because circumstances will vary across the company. The goal will be to harmonize business units to unlock the combined strengths of the respective business teams. Once these alignments take effect, you can expect a much greater level of communications and involvement as the businesses pursue growth and operational strategies.

3. How is this going to be communicated externally? When can I communicate this to the clients I work with?

This announcement will be made public when it is filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission later today. Those associates who are authorized to speak on behalf of the company to clients and customers have been notified by their business leaders. Otherwise, as previously noted, please refrain from speaking on the company's behalf.

4. I am in a functional area, how are we going to be providing support to the different units in our region?

Functional areas at present continue to support the areas for which they previously held responsibility, and as the organizational picture develops, functional roles will strengthen where appropriate and reporting relationships will become clearer.

5. When are the layoffs going to be communicated to affected employees, and how will these decisions be made?

Employment adjustments are expected over time as the two entities merge. As redundancies and overlapping resources are addressed, the specific timing and scope of these actions will vary. Every effort will be made to communicate individual employment status as soon as possible in an effort to reduce uncertainty and anxiety. Stanley and Black & Decker have well documented procedures to ensure reductions in force are achieved with fairness, consistency and objectivity. These procedures will be followed. While it is difficult to estimate the total impact to the combined company, early assessments suggest that reductions affecting not more than 10% of the workforce would be a reasonable assumption.

6. Black and Decker and Stanley have different compensation, employment and benefits practices. How is this going to impact my employment in short term and long term?

We expect modest adjustment relating to compensation and benefits in the short term (through 2010).

As the company harmonizes its operations to build a common culture, there will be further adjustments, but on balance we do not foresee major departures from the values of existing plans in aggregate.

An integration team is currently assessing and comparing practices in place relating to compensation, employment and benefits side-by-side and will make recommendations to the executive team on a go-forward basis.

7. Now that the high level structure is in place, what is next?

It is important to note that we continue to operate as two separate companies until such time as we obtain shareholder and regulatory approval and we announce that the transaction has closed.

The structure that we announced today was a Day One structure, to clarify and resolve open questions so that we hit the ground running.

Now that the high level proposed structure is in place, the next step will be for Segment, Business and Integration teams to propose their next level structure.

8. We have been told for quite some time that we should continue with business as usual. Does this announcement change this at all given that there are new regional leaders in place?

No, we continue to operate as two separate companies until such time as we obtain shareholder and regulatory approval and we announce that the transaction has closed.

9. I report to a regional leader/President/VP & GM who is not on the superstructure. Do I report to this new person?

Currently, no. Your existing reporting relationships remain in tact. The organization structure defined today is high-level, and as more detailed organization plans are available, further reporting structures will be clarified.

10. When will I find out about my job? When will the remainder of the org chart be plotted?

We are planning to have the next level organization structure complete by the end of February, although it cannot be guaranteed that all position-level information will be available at that time.

Stanley Black & Decker Corporate Structure Organization Announcement Employee Q&A

11. How were decisions made regarding the leadership structure?

The executive leadership team carefully reviewed experience, qualifications, talents, leadership qualities, and more, before conducting extensive one on one interviews with all candidates.

12. Will the new leader(s) of the Stanley team who occupy the previous roles that a B&D employee occupied reach out to me or should I contact them to introduce myself?

When and where appropriate, new leaders of the combined company will reach out to their respective teams.

13. Directionally, how will decisions regarding our business units be made moving forward under the new structure (ie: goals for Engineering, PT, EMH)?

On a global basis, all businesses will sync in to an operating rhythm that includes annual strategy reviews, annual worldwide product planning sessions, annual organization and people reviews, and quarterly reviews conducted with the executive management team. Each business will determine its rhythm and goal setting process outside of these macro rhythms.
