Clough Global Funds

To our Shareholders:

During the six months ended September 30, 2012, the Global Allocation Fund (GLV) total return, assuming reinvestment of all distributions, was 0.01% based on the net asset value and 1.48% based on the market price of the stock. That compares with 3.42% return for the S&P 500 for the same period. Since the Fund s inception on July 28, 2004, the average annual total return assuming reinvestment of all distributions has been 6.41%, this compares to an average annual total return of 5.49% for the S&P 500 through September 30, 2012. Total distributions, based on the current dividend rate of $0.30 per share, offer a yield of 8.86% on a market price of $13.54 as of September 30, 2012.

During the six months ended September 30, 2012, the Global Equity Fund (GLQ) total return, assuming reinvestment of all distributions, was -0.41% based on the net asset value and 3.19% based on the market price of the stock. That compares with 3.42% return for the S&P 500 for the same period. Since the Fund s inception on April 27, 2005, the average annual total return assuming reinvestment of all distributions has been 5.47%, this compares to an average annual total return of 3.66% for the S&P 500 through September 30, 2012. Total distributions, based on the current dividend rate of $0.29 per share, offer a yield of 8.99% on a market price of $12.90 as of September 30, 2012.

During the six months ended September 30, 2012, the Global Opportunities Fund (GLO) total return, assuming reinvestment of all distributions, was -0.33% based on the net asset value and 4.26% based on the market price of the stock. That compares with 3.42% return for the S&P 500 for the same period. Since the Fund s inception on April 25, 2006, the average annual total return assuming reinvestment of all distributions has been 2.64%, this compares to an average annual total return of 3.74% for the S&P 500 through September 30, 2012. Total distributions, based on the current dividend rate of $0.27 per share, offer a yield of 9.23% on a market price of $11.70 as of September 30, 2012.

The Consumer Discretionary sector was the biggest contributor to performance, led by News Corp., Time Warner and H&R Block. Positions in US Financials and Energy shorts were also key contributors. Energy Longs, Index hedges and short positions in European Banks modestly detracted from performance.

Over the last six months investors continue to react to the known negatives. Low trading volume and high volatility testify to the lack of any interest in investing and a small amount of buying or selling can trigger big moves. Incomes are slowing, a fiscal cliff looming, savings rates are ratcheting upward and Europe threatens to disintegrate at any moment. The Investment Company Institute reported that investors sold $15 billion out of domestic equity mutual funds in August ($77 billion year to date; bond funds have seen inflows of $207 billion), yet equity prices are higher. Risk aversion has reached all sectors. Sovereign funds in Asia are selling stocks and bonds and building cash. If the flows out of equity funds simply slowed, stocks would likely find a bid. It would be impossible to redeploy those funds should sentiment become less pessimistic.

Many stocks have been moving higher even as the overall market remains weak, a positive divergence.

The Fund is exposed to five strategies:

1) Companies generating high free cash flow yields. Free cash flow continues to build in the corporate world even as the economy loses speed and it remains our largest strategy. Industries most represented include technology and media/content but in several instances we have made special situation investments. Since public market prices are now higher than private market values, we think of these positions as better than owning a private business. One is H&R Block, which dominates the tax preparation industry and whose growth seems assured as the tax code becomes more complex. The company boasts a 39% return on equity and a 5% yield.

We believe Business Development Companies (BDCs) are another way of capturing yield from healthy US corporate balance sheets. BDCs are a REIT like structure that provide senior and mezzanine financing to middle market companies that are too small to access the public high yield markets. The funds currently own six BDCs that yield between 8% and 11%. The yield from BDCs is roughly 2% to 3% greater than a BB rated index or high yield ETF. Priced at book value, we believe these names have potential for price appreciation in addition to the attractive yields. The fund s largest position in BDCs is Ares Capital (ARCC).

2) We are invested in North American financial stocks, particularly the money center banks. The Funds are also short selected European financials with capital needs. Once again this strategy has been encumbered by a renewed Do Not Short rule in Europe, but we added to the trade a bit before this rule was reinstituted. Data points in the US housing sector continue to signal a bottom in the residential mortgage cycle, making severe price-to-book discounts in the banking sector less explainable. Meanwhile US money center banks and brokerage firms are apparently worth more dead than alive. Discounts to book values, tangible and otherwise, often signal they are bankrupt however they are not.

The large discounts to tangible book will likely tighten in the months ahead. US Banks are increasingly over reserved as the credit structure improves in quality. Loss reserves at major banks are currently 2.5x actual current charge offs. Not only are they well above average but since charge offs are declining, they are even further above future needs. After several years of high underwriting standards, the higher quality new loan book is beginning to exceed the spotty loans written over the last decade.

The US Federal Reserve s efforts to bolster markets by buying mortgage securities in unlimited amounts support the large US banks we own. Not only should bank revenues rise as asset values appreciate and lending picks up, but a positive yield curve will lead to higher net interest spreads. All of this is buttressed by a natural cyclical pickup in mortgage activity. We understand that there are structural and policy induced impediments to ROE performance, but from a valuation standpoint that is offset by much lower leverage. By contrast, Europe s banks are far more leveraged and have accomplished little to no restructuring.

3) Emerging market consumer growth investments. Emerging market negatives are dissipating as equities reach historically low valuations and their central banks ease credit. Emerging market investing will not be as easy as it was in the first decade of the century and our analysts are focusing their efforts on discovering the companies they think will build the important brands in these developing consumer markets. Emerging market funds are beginning to experience inflows after two years of liquidation. They saw a modest $1.45 billion inflow, suggesting it may not be difficult to generate renewed interest in that asset class.

The China story has generated its fair share of controversy over the last couple of years. A popular target of Western economists and politicians, our view remains, that China s ascendency from an insignificant economy to becoming the second largest in the world should continue, not at the double digit GDP growth rates that we saw in the past, but at a more sustainable level. Growth at these levels would be the envy of the West and still provide a fertile environment for not only earnings, but the development of world class operations and brands.

While US policies are directed toward inflating assets, Chinese officials are determined to prevent asset bubbles and liquidity remains constrained in the economy. Sentiment toward emerging markets and China in particular is about as negative as we have seen it. Since the peak in China equities in 2010, the Shanghai A share index is down 43% and continues to plumb new lows, while the S&P 500 is 40% higher. In the beginning of October, valuations of Chinese listed corporations hit those levels found during the Global Financial Crisis in 2008. Clearly the market feared an economic hard landing for the Chinese economy. Recent data points released from industrial production, monetary aggregates, and inflation reflect a more benign environment, which has resulted in a rally in the local equity markets. Given this improved sentiment, we have opportunistically increased our exposure to China.

A bullish event for Chinese equities would occur if the financial sector was reformed and a strong private capital market developed. Data from the Bank for International Settlements show that in two years the volume of non-financial corporate debt issued by Chinese companies nearly doubled to almost $700 billion. We hold two of the largest investment banks in China who should be at the forefront in taking advantage of financial sector reform. Unlike investment houses based in the West, these institutions have very little leverage.

4) Our investments in the Energy sector. We have inaugurated a position in US based coal companies, particularly low cost producers leveraged to steam coal used in power generation. We will explain our thinking on coal more thoroughly in subsequent letters but suffice it to point out equities of the major North American producers in some instances have lost 85-90% of their value, and we find tremendous value. Coal will likely lose share to natural gas in coming years, high cost mines throughout Appalachia are being closed or legislated out of existence and many of the remaining mines are more than competitive with gas at $3.50 per MMBtu, a price we think will be comfortably exceeded in coming years. Even as coal usage declines these properties could be highly profitable. Many inefficient producers are bankrupt, supply has been cut back sharply and the industry s remaining market capitalization for the listed companies is $341 billion, down from $403 billion in 2007. Demand for steam coal could recover strongly in 2013. Given how depressed they are that could send them sharply higher. Meanwhile, natural gas inventories have narrowed from 700 bcf over the five year average in March to 270 bcf due to flat production, a very warm summer and coal to gas switching. Normal winter weather should increase demand for gas and derivatively, coal.

5) Short positions in over-valued commodities. Among commodities we are short iron ore mining, other industrial metals stocks, and the capital equipment companies that supply them but have initial long positions in both gold mining companies and North American coal producers.

Metal stocks rallied on the basis of QE3 and the announcement of China s infrastructure spending. Yet supply/demand fundamentals remain weak and capacity remains overbuilt. BHP Billiton, the world s largest mining company, cancelled more than $30 billion of planned development in Australia. And trading was temporarily halted in another Australian mining company s stock as a debt restructuring was forced upon it. We think these are just the first salvos in the metal sector s secular problems. In the recent rally our short positions did not lose much value.

In conclusion, we have observed that The Funds continue to sell at discounts to net asset value, but we feel that our efforts to support the current distributions make the dividend yields very attractive and, we think, sustainable. One consideration regarding the nearly 9% dividend yields of the three Funds, is this yield is calculated on market price, which has been magnified by the discount to NAV. Since the Funds trade at discounts over 13%, the distribution levels that we can sustain on net asset values are amplified to investors. Further, the Funds employ leverage within the portfolios, which also augments the income generation capabilities of the underlying investments. We feel this dynamic is worth mentioning given a fair amount of attention that has been recently placed on the sustainability of dividends within the universe of closed end mutual funds. For our portfolios we feel the investment opportunities that exist in the marketplace today with a now steeper yield curve (at low funding costs), combined with the investments we have made in high dividend paying equities, give us confidence that our portfolios invested with modest leverage, while trading at a near 13% discounts to net asset value, are capable of sustaining their attractive dividend yield to investors.

We appreciate your confidence in us and endeavor to do the best job we can of investing our clients assets. We sincerely appreciate your interest in our funds. If you have any questions about your investment, please call 1-877-256-8445.

Sincerely,

Charles I. Clough, Jr.
