Express Scripts Holding Company posted the following communication to its intranet site available to its employees on May 16, 2018.

Update on Cigna Deal Progress

As we make progress in the potential combination of Express Scripts and Cigna, we want to keep you updated on key milestones we reach along the way. Today, our companies provided information to our shareholders about how the deal came to be, the rationale and potential benefits of the deal, and more specifics around what the company will look like if the deal is approved.

We are on track to close the deal before the end of this year, as planned. Of course, we, and Cigna, remain separate companies and continue to operate independently. If the deal closes as we expect it will, we have made some decisions about the future of Express Scripts:

After the closing, the corporate and operational functions for the Express Scripts business will be located in St. Louis, as they are today.

Our products and services will continue to be marketed and branded under the name Express Scripts.

Tim Wentworth will be the president of the Express Scripts division, reporting into the combined company's CEO.

Four of our current independent Board members will join the combined company's board.

The announcement does provide some important insights: our work continues to be incredibly important, the brand we have built together continues to be very valuable, and the opportunities ahead of us continue to be expansive," said Tim Wentworth, president & CEO. "We will play a crucial leadership role in shaping what the combined company should look like and what we will be able to do. Leaders at both companies have kicked off a joint process that will help determine what the future company can do and how it should be structured. When the deal closes, the two combined companies will, together, be uniquely positioned to do even more to improve healthcare, expand choice and lower costs. We have a lot of change going on right now, and there is more to come. Even with great change, we must remain focused on what we are here to do: expose opportunities, take on the toughest, and get better together. That's what being Champions for Better is all about.

As further decisions are made, we will continue to update you and answer your questions. We will continue to update our FAQ on the Hub, and if you have a new question, please submit it here (LINK) and we will answer it.
