ITEM 5. OTHER EVENTS.

The Registrant has previously reported with respect to certain environmental matters regarding the lower Fox River in Wisconsin, upon which the Registrant operates a manufacturing facility. On October 2, 2001, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (WDNR) and the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) released a Proposed Remedial Action Plan (PRAP), which sets forth WDNR and EPA's proposed remedy to address alleged contamination in the lower Fox River and Green Bay. Six parties in addition to the Registrant have been identified by the agencies as potentially responsible for this alleged contamination.

The proposed remedy would include the removal of approximately 7.25 million cubic yards of sediment and long-term monitoring. WDNR and EPA estimate that various activities proposed by the PRAP will cost approximately $307.6 million, without a contingency factor. There is no assurance that the cost estimates contained in the PRAP are accurate. Based on cost estimates of large-scale dredging remedies at other sites, interested parties believe that the PRAP's cost estimates may be significantly understated. The Registrant does not believe that the proposed remedial activities are appropriate or cost effective. The Registrant believes that a protective remedy can be implemented at a much lower actual cost using barrier techniques (such as capping) and monitoring, rather than large-scale dredging. In addition, the Registrant maintains that its share of any liability for the alleged contamination is much less than one-seventh of the total liability and that additional responsible parties exist other than those currently identified by the agencies.

The Registrant intends to vigorously advocate for the implementation of less costly but environmentally protective alternatives. The public and interested parties may submit comments to the PRAP from October 5, 2001 to December 7, 2001. There is a possibility that the agencies may extend this comment period. The Registrant intends to submit extensive comments to the PRAP. EPA, in consultation with WDNR, will consider comments on the PRAP and will then select a remedy for the site.
