MERGER Q&A

A series of Q&As concerning the proposed merger

Human resources and corporate communications are working together to collect employees' questions concerning the announced merger between PSEG and Exelon, and will try to answer them in a timely fashion. While change and uncertainty are not easy, please realize that for many of these questions, there simply are no immediate answers and, for some questions, we may not have answers for some time.

For example, there are definite answers to some questions: Will the corporate headquarters be in Chicago? Yes. Will PSE&G remain in New Jersey? Yes. Will there be a reduction in staff if the merger is approved? Yes. There are, however, many other questions that cannot be answered this early in the process: What will the new organization look like? What benefits will I have if the merger goes through? Will the benefits I have today be the same five years from now? While lack of an answer is unsettling, we are committed to responding to your questions as soon as answers are available.

If you have a question you would like answered, you can submit it by e-mail to MergerQuestions@PSEG.com. If we can answer your question at that time, we will. However, we will also let you know if we currently are unable to answer your question.

Here are answers to more of your questions:

Q. We have been told that all movements, promotions, job changes, etc., have been suspended in light of the pending Exelon merger. If that is so, why are we still receiving job postings via CareerLink?"

A. All movements, promotions and job changes have not been suspended. Operating companies will review their existing MAST vacancies in light of the merger to determine if the position should continue to be staffed. If the position does need to be filled, it will be done so by temporary or contractor help, where possible. Bargaining-unit positions will continue to be filled. All requisitions must be approved in writing by a direct report to the CEO before they can be filled. The CareerLink posting process will continue to be used in filling these jobs.

Q. How will the merger impact 2005 labor contract negotiations? How does all of this affect our unions and the contracts we have with this company? Will anything change?

A. Contract negotiations with the four labor unions in New Jersey were well under way before the merger announcement. It is not anticipated that the merger will negatively impact negotiations. In addition, the labor contracts that are in effect the day before the merger is completed will remain the same after the deal is finalized.

Q. The first Merger Q&A that went out in late December stated: Generally, people in positions that will need to be refilled will not be offered severance. Does this mean that a person in an existing job might be terminated even though that job will not be eliminated? Will you give some examples of where this might occur?

A. The statement, People in positions that will need to be refilled will not be offered severance means that if an employee who is in a position required for the future company operations elects to leave, he or she would not be eligible for severance.
