The following e-mail, announcing the first round of decisions on the post-merger organizational structure in the sales and services areas, was sent by Gary Bloom, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of VERITAS, to the employees of Symantec and VERITAS on March 2, 2005:

* * *

Hello Everyone:

As we continue to progress through the regulatory processes to complete the planned merger of Symantec and VERITAS, we have been actively working to align our planned go-to-market approach for our first day of combined operations. Having clarity in this area will be critical to maintaining and expanding our revenue, supporting our partner relationships, and driving customer success.

I m pleased to announce our first round of decisions on the post-merger organizational structure in the sales and services area of the business. Our plans for the Corporate Development organization will be announced at a later date.

- * Tom Kendra will lead our Worldwide Sales organization reporting to me.
- * Greg Hughes will lead our Worldwide Services (Consulting, Education, Customer Support) organization reporting to me.
- * Steve Messick will lead the Americas sales organization reporting to Tom. The Americas organization will include the United States, Canada, and Latin America.
- * Lindsey Armstrong will lead the sales organization for Europe, the Middle East, and Africa reporting to Tom.
- * Steve Leonard will lead the Asia Pacific Japan sales organization reporting to Tom.

The post-merger roles for Art Matin, Mike Coney, Guiseppe Verrini, and Vince Steckler will be announced at a later date. All of these individuals are very critical and very successful executives at Symantec or VERITAS and will continue to play an active role in deciding the roles and responsibilities for their respective groups for the post-merger organization. They will also continue their current roles in delivering on goals for both companies between now and the time we complete the merger transaction.

Like John Thompson, I have met with many employees from Symantec and VERITAS and I can feel the excitement and anticipation of the merger building. I can also sense the desire to move beyond the planning process to the execution phase of the merger and I am personally looking forward to our first day of combined operations.

However, in the interim window between now and the close, I would once again like to remind everyone of the importance of our focus on the current Symantec and VERITAS businesses. A strong close to Symantec's final quarter of the year and VERITAS' first fiscal quarter is critical to maintaining the business momentum that is part of the foundation of the merger. The teams at both companies have the opportunity to exceed their business goals and achieve both personal and team success. Key to this success will be the ongoing focus on our customers, the business opportunities aligned for the quarter, and our customers' successful deployment and use of our respective technologies.

While the vast majority of you stay completely focused on the business objectives at hand, we will continue the integration planning and will provide you with further announcements on the planned sales and services organizations.

Thank you all for your dedication and hard work since we announced the merger.

Gary
