 Total Returns on Net Asset Value

 The Allmerica Securities Trust returned (1.06)% for the third quarter of 2005, underperforming its benchmark, the Lehman Brothers U.S. Credit Index*, which returned (1.00)%. The dividend paid for the period was $0.1375 per share.

Yields moved markedly higher during the third quarter after the market observed that the economy remained fairly robust, even after the devastation wreaked by two powerful hurricanes. The benchmark ten-year Treasury note ended the quarter yielding 4.32%, up 41 basis points from three months ago, although below where it began the year. All measures of inflation moved higher this year, even as the Federal Reserve Board (Fed) raised rates by 25 basis points at each of its FOMC meetings. With the exception of consumer confidence, which took the biggest monthly plunge since October of 1990 in September, all indications point to continued strength in the underlying economy, as we enter the fourth quarter. Some of the up-tick seen in the manufacturing sector is no doubt related to the hurricane rebuilding effort in the Gulf Coast region. In addition, housing remains strong in most areas and exports should benefit from the recent vitality seen in Japan and Europe. As long as the energy supply problem remains temporary, the Investment Manager believes that the outlook for the economy is sound, giving the Fed ample rationale to continue with its measured tightening policy into early next year.

Excess returns were posted this quarter from the corporate sector (26 basis points), Agencies (6 basis points) and asset-backed securities (14 basis points). Negative excess returns were felt from mortgage-backed (-24 bps) and commercial mortgage-backed (-6 bps) securities. The corporate sector rebounded from a weak first half to lead all sectors in terms of excess return. The turmoil in the auto sector largely impacted corporate returns and impacted the portfolio, as well. The portfolio continues to hold about a 2% position in Ford securities and a 0.5% position in General Motors Acceptance Corporation (GMAC). Although these issues generate strong income, the principal price decline has been a significant drag on performance. The portfolio held approximately a 1% position in both Sprint and Goldman Sachs, which were among the best performers for the quarter. The portfolio is positioned with an overweight in the "BBB" and below securities, which have underperformed the higher quality sectors year-to-date. Given the relative tightness of spreads, the Investment Manager sold or reduced several positions that have performed well year-to-date and do not have any obvious upside potential and/or provide limited income return. Among these are Conoco, Bank of New York, GE, Illinois Toolworks and Clear Channel Communications. The Investment Manager did add a few names which may represent value and have potential for spread tightening and/or upgrade. Mylan Labs, Telecom Italia, Enterprise Products, and JPMorgan Chase are in this group.

The Investment Manager believes that the yield curve flattening that has occurred this year is responsible for keeping total returns in positive territory. With eleven consecutive increases by the Fed, most observers would have expected longer-term Treasuries to sell off more. Foreign buying and confidence in the Fed have combined to keep yields on ten and thirty-year Treasuries well below 5%. The Investment Manager believes that it is this muted price decline that has kept overall bond returns in positive territory at all in 2005 and hopes that rates continue to be well-behaved in 2006, as the Fed finishes its march to a neutral federal funds rate.
